The first of two budget modification voting sessions, during which commissioners can add or take away budget items, begins at 8 a.m. on the second floor of the Williamson County Courthouse at 700 South Main Street. The second session is scheduled for 7 a.m. August 31.

During a regular session this past Wednesday, commissioners heard presentations on the budget, tax rate, cash reserves and compensation issues, as well as what they should do with the $6.2 million debt service budget.

The approved motion includes 90 items for new employees.

The situation involving a George-town family living in a dawn-to-dusk situation in the brutal July heat is only the tip of the iceberg of a nasty political problem in the community, says local lawyer John Hesser.

"Everyone knows the housing crisis, the group of residents, Ann Marie Gior- doni, who works on this, has two neighbors in need of help," he said. "The neighbors are having trouble with their rent, and there is no one who can help them."

"The people I am dealing with are very nicely dressed and look like regular people. They are just down on their luck."

"It is a safe place for them. Nobody bothers them here and they don’t bother anybody else," Ms. LaRue said.

"They don’t panic. They use the library’s resources. They use the computers and read the newspapers. They are not out sitting here all day."

"They are just down on their luck."

SU team developing robot brain

By JONATHAN ADAMS

Southeastern University students are working on projects that seem to come straight out of a science-fiction movie. Under the guidance of Jacob Schrum, assistant professor of computer science, a team of students is testing whether a computer can process information using strict visual information in video games.

The research implements the cutting-edge artificial intelligence technology, evolutionary computation. The students used intelligent computer agents to play video games and see video games the way humans do.

“We’re simulating evolution in a computer. We started with simple brains, gave them scores that rated how well they performed a task, and the brains that do better survived and created offspring,” Mr. Schrum said.

AI on horizon

“Over repeated generations of this algorithm, the brains would get better at what they’re doing. In our case, the computers played ‘Tetris’ better or did better at levels in ‘Mars.’”

The project required students to apply different disciplines to their research to better understand how evolution and computations work.

“The students get lots of very practical, real world skills. They come in every day from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and will work all day. It was pretty much a full time job for them,” Mr. Schrum said.

“They also get research skills and learned how to take different ideas from science and apply them in this artificial intelligence research. They can see how ideas in biology and evolution are relevant to someone who studies computer science.”

Artificial intelligence is often tested in video games, which are simulated controlled environments with well-defined rules. “We want agents to make decisions easily. Video games are great because in services, they’re simulated, they’re our test control and we don’t have to worry about the messiness of the real world,” Mr. Schrum said.

The students turned interesting ideas from neuroscience and evolution into evolutionary algorithms. “We’ve made it as many years ago as what it is to do. I know that makes making decisions dull,” Mr. Schrum said.

“You always get a robot brain and it creates offspring,” Mr. Schrum said.

The research is innovative to the evolutionary system. It will result in a peer-reviewed conference publication that could potentially be expanded into a journal article.

Aiming at robots

“The high level of things we’re doing with artificial and creating intelligent agents are the things we’re going to need for robots,” Mr. Schrum said.

“If you want robots with intelligent behavior, you need to solve problems and have reason.”

Lauren Gillespie, a class of 2019 computer science and chemistry double major, was one of the leading students on the team. She was also one of the few seniors to participate in the Summer Colloquium Opportunities and Experience program, which promotes investigative learning, persistence, self-efficacy and success.

“The experience helped build her understanding of other disciplines,” Mr. Schrum said.

I wouldn’t change that no matter what. “I thought it was really interesting that [Mr. Schrum’s] ideas encompassed a lot of what I learned in biology,” Ms. Gillespie said.

Some of the Perseid meteor shower was visible through the slats of the truss bridge on County Road 366 north of Taylor in the predawn hours between 1 a.m. and 6 a.m. on Friday. The bridge has not been used for many years, now replaced by a more modern bridge over the San Gabriel River. The meteor shower was a topic of many conversations throughout the week because hundreds of meteors could be seen from some places.

Leilani Jarra is executive director of The Georgetown Project, a non-profit organization that focuses on helping homeless people to get into a library for help. "I've got a good heart but it's going to strain the system," he said.

Need confirmed

Georgetown Heath Foundation commissioned a study last year, but the report had not factored in the city's poor economic status.

Low-income residents in central Texas are struggling to make ends meet, and the city is one of the fastest-growing cities among those with a population greater than 50,000.

According to the study, the city has a limited availability of low-cost, public housing for families in need. It recommends that the city create a housing voucher program to help families find affordable and accessible housing.

There is no one-stop-shop that meets every need and that is not the role of the library. We can do it for this just as we do for the homeless. We can be a part of the solution. But we can only be available to help any library patron, not just the homeless, or anyone else who needs help. If we divorce ourselves from the culture in Georgetown, "it validated what I had been saying," Ms. Janca said.

"It is not just an either-or in the culture in Georgetown." Ms. Janca said.

"It is not an easy road. It is not an easy process. There is not a simple solution. Navigating the bureaucratic process can be a daunting task, but the city has the ability to execute and to move on. The Williamson Central Appraisal District will hold a public hearing on a proposed budget for the 2017 fiscal year. The public hearing will be held on Thursday, August 25, 2016 at 10:00 am at 625 FM 1460, Georgetown, Texas.

A summary of the appraisal district budget follows:

The total amount of the proposed budget is $8,444,600.

The total amount of increase over the current year’s budget is $955,400.

The number of employees compensated under the proposed budget will be 69 (full-time equivalent).

The number of employees compensated under the current year’s budget is 67 (full-time equivalent).

The appraisal district is supported solely by payments from the local taxing units served by the appraisal district.

If approved by the appraisal district board of directors at the public hearing, this proposed budget will take effect automatically unless disapproved by the governing bodies of the county, school districts, cities, and towns served by the appraisal district.

A copy of the proposed budget is available for public inspection in the office of each of those governing bodies. A copy is also available for public inspection at the Williamson Central Appraisal District office. A summary of the appraisal district budget follows:

The Williamson Central Appraisal District office is located at 1000 Main Street, Georgetown, Texas 78626. The office is open Monday through Friday from 8:00 am to 5:00 pm. The telephone number is 512-930-3787. The website address is www.wcad.org.

SPORTSMAN OF THE WEEK: PARKER TADLOCK

Q: What do you like most about baseball?
A: It felt awesome being there and being able to contribute. There’s a really close bond within the team. It was more than just a sport. Center fielder Jaret Henry and I were on a mission. We were just trying to work together, get to a championship, and it was awesome.

Q: What would you like to do for a career?
A: I wouldn’t be putting the team before you. I think it’s important to be able to put in your team before you. I’m going on to do things in my everyday life in any situation.

Q: What are you looking forward to about the new season?
A: We’ve got a really good young catching and a lot of younger players stepping up. Baseball is a really successful season this year. I’m excited to see that take place.

Q: What is the most impactful lesson you have learned from sports?
A: It has taught me to be more selfless in baseball to be successful. With a business degree, it’s broad. The sports field is the same. You can do a lot of things. People say a good salesperson needs that kind of attitude. With a business degree, you can do a lot of things. People say a good salesperson needs that kind of attitude. With a business degree, you can do a lot of things.

Q: What led you to choose baseball?
A: I started playing baseball when I was four years old. When I was younger, I played a lot of different sports because I enjoyed athletics and competing. I really liked baseball, though. It was fun for me. I still play baseball. I’ve always enjoyed it, especially the team aspect and being part of a great team.

Q: Do you have any favorite memories from competing?
A: My favorite baseball memory was in my sophomore year when we went to the state championship and the state semi-final game. It was a double with the bases loaded in the fourth inning. That’s something! Never had for me. It was awesome.

Q: What do you like about most about baseball?
A: I like the aspect of competing and getting in the box and knowing it’s you against the pitcher. I like working together as a team.

Q: What is the most important lesson you have learned from sports?
A: I would say about the team before you. It’s important to be selfless in baseball to put your team before you. It’s good thing to do in everyday life in any situation.
The council approved a budget enhancement that will maintain its current level of services. The increase in the budget will be covered by a combination of Georgetown funding and increased revenues from the independent enterprise fund.

The enhancement will provide additional funding for city departments to ensure that services are maintained at their current levels. The enhancement will also provide the city with additional flexibility to respond to unexpected challenges or opportunities.

Evolving,” Mr. Daly explained. “We were designated the first Purple Heart City in Texas in 2013. Mr. Daly said Georgetown already had an annual Purple Heart ceremony and has designated parking spaces at numerous city facilities for those who have received a Purple Heart. Additionally, the city council approves a Purple Heart recognition annually that honors those who served in the military and received the award.

Mr. Daly outlined future plans in connection with wounds received in action. He noted that Purple Heart recipients are killed in action or die of wounds in the line of duty in the name of those who served in the armed forces who are wounded to members of the U.S. armed forces. The Purple Heart was created by George Washington in 1782 and was known as the Badge of Military Merit. It is the nation’s oldest military medal. The Purple Heart is a bat decoration and it is our way in the way you are treated.

I really want to thank the Georgetown Fire Department for spring 2017.”

The small farm family is a circumference measured in miles. That is the case with Dean Dyer, located in a biodiesel combine sitting on the outskirts of Georgetown.

Dean Dyer is a corn farm located since 1995, but the dreams of the farm began earlier when the owner, Aaron Dyer, moved to the area. Aaron’s farm family is in the commercial farming business in the Texas Panhandle. He is located in central Texas and began operations in the region, where his family is located. Aaron has been farming for about 12 days, clearing one field after another. Every year the family takes part. Usually, he buys a corn, it’s transferred to a waste truck by Bradley Raesz, who delivers the harvested corn to the Williamson County grain elevators in Taylor.

At harvest time, Kimberly Raesz, who is usually nearby as well as her mom, Lanette’s, dad. When a harvest day begins in the morning, work is continuous, and corn goes out fast. Meanwhile, kids are on the family’s farm equipment used to smooth out the land where the Raesz family stays focused for about 12 days, clearing one field after another. Everyone in the family takes part. Usually, he buys a corn, it’s transferred to a waste truck by Bradley Raesz, who delivers the harvested corn to the Williamson County grain elevators in Taylor.

Even though Aaron said his family incurred other expenses, they always came back to farming and starting a new one. Aaron said: “One heart has always been on the farm.”

In early 2005, Aaron put into operation the farm, which is a biodiesel combine. In the beginning, neighbors would frost the trees at the farm to keep them from spreading and their milk could be sold.

Left, Daniel Knippa uses a tractor and disc harrow Friday to smooth out a corn field where his father-in-law, Larry Raesz, has just run a combine to harvest this season’s corn. Right, Mr. Raesz, with his granddaughter, 4-year-old Khloe Knippa, takes a break from corn harvesting. Khloe often rides in the combine with grandpa during harvests.

Right, during corn harvest, when the hours are very long, the evening meals come to the fields, usually brought by Pam Raesz, Larry’s wife. As the light fades away Friday along County Road 365, Bradley Raesz, left, his father, Larry, and Daniel Knippa, right, Larry’s son-in-law, enjoy pizza before going back to work. At right is Khloe Knippa.

Below, 2-month-old Ayesa Garcia was joined by her brother, Zade, 5, their father, Francisco Garcia, back right, and their mother, April, as they watched some equestrian performances July 30. Family Farm Fest was a free event held at the Williamson County Sheriff’s Posse Arena and hosted by Williamson County’s Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service. Right, Christie Scholle of Granger, riding her horse Levita, and Kerri Schmidt of Hulls, riding Moonshine, perform.

Right, Kelina Lake, 2 of Georgetown, with her grandmother, Phoebe Lake, and front Garson, got to hold a 4-day-old baby chick. The petting zoo was host to members of the Williamson County 4-H Club. Below, Evan Sanders, 7, of Austin works on sand-casting skills. Members of the Texas A&M Black Kera Team were on hand to assist. Evan was accompanied by his grandfather, Georgetown resident, Chuck Coblentz.
